- Day 15 -

I am NOT their leader!

They ask me about every damn little decision there is to make!

By the gods, I didn't ask for this!

I'm not good with words, I'm good with actions.

A few days ago, we met a man in the forest. He didn't try to kill us on sight, so we thought that he could join us in our camp. Help each other out...

Of course that was another mouth to feed, but he seemed able and strong. As long as he does his share of work, I don't care...

Blodeuwedd and her sister tried to make him speak about his past, but he is hiding something from us. Moira says it's important to learn about him, to know if we can trust him. For me, what's in the past should stay in the past. We started anew on this damned island. Let's not bring older problems into our enormous bowl of CURRENT problems.

Speaking of problems... The man proved to be one, in the end. He robbed us. Oh, not much, just what to eat and drink, but here, it means A LOT. We caught him. They all asked me what to do of him. I said, "Banish him from the camp, forever. We don't need robbers." The man fell on his knees and begged us for mercy. He gave us some fruits he stole from one of Björn's men, and promised more if we kept him with us.

Blodeuwedd took pity on the miserable man and said that we should punish him but keep him. The others agreed. I didn't. But they don't listen to me.

I am not their leader...
